PREFACE

The State of Goa has a coastline of about 104 kms. It has 250 kms of inland waterways and also a number of small tanks of fish ponds covering an area of 100 hectares. The coast is full of creeks and estuaries and is unique, as such a small stretch of coast of seven major rivers viz. Terekhol, Chapora, Mandovi, Zuari, Sal, Talpona & Galgibag open into the sea and these provide excellent nurseries for major fishes as well as good shelters for fishing crafts. The coastal and inshore waters are known to be very rich in fishery resources especially because of the huge shoals of mackerels and sardines, which regularly migrate to the shore during the fishing season and yield abundant catches.

The main objective of the Fisheries Department is to increase fish production by utilization of the available natural resources, to ameliorate the socio economic conditions of the fisherman who belong to the weaker sections of the society. To develop infrastructure for marine and traditional fisheries, to develop storage and marketing infrastructure, to develop fresh water fish culture to increase inland fish production and also development of eco friendly brackish water aquaculture.

To achieve these objectives department is implementing various schemes like financial assistance to acquire fishing canoe, motorization of canoe, purchase of Fishery requisites, subsidy on kerosene for out board motor operators, supply of insulated boxes, Reimbursement of VAT, Life Jackets, lifebuoy, Biometric cards, other equipments etc. Creation of infrastructure facilities like construction of jetties, fish landing ramps and other infrastructure facilities. Besides welfare schemes like insurance cover for Fishermen, saving cum relief fund, housing scheme etc. are being implemented. The export of marine fish contributes considerable foreign exchange to the Indian economy.

The Department endeavors to serve the Fishermen and the public in many fields of Fisheries Sector, for which the Citizen’s Charter has been brought out and will be of great help to the Fishermen in particular and public in general.
